The Wolf

Wolf is the world famous, professional burglar who is the central character of the play Something to Talk About. Sydney's are very proud of having such a well-known thief in their home, and are rather grateful to him that he has provided an opportunity to break their dull and monotonous life. Wolf is an expert in his field and is always fully equipped to meet various situations. He has instruments to cut open the safe. He plans according to the correct information. He is very brave, even minded, and bold. He allowed all the members of the family to see him working without any fear. Here he faces a different type of situation but handles it intelligently. He appears to be a greedy man like all other burglars. Redchester's family members request him to return presents, he refuses to do so and says that business is business but when he comes to know about the great wealth next door he returns all the gifts. He is an admirer of beauty and appreciates
